Literary, Athletic Preliminaries To Be Run First Day

Finals For Championship Southwest Arkansas Saturday

HUNDREDS ENTERED

Hope, Nashville and Murfreesboro Favored in Dozen Possible Winners

Hope will welcome the literary and athletic contestants of a dozen South Arkansas high school when the District Ten tournament opens in this city Friday afternoon.

The registration booth at Hope city hall is to open at 7 o'clock Thursday night, with A. L. Burns, program chairman, in charge. Registrations will be accepted up to 9 p. m. Thursday, and the booth will be open again Friday and Saturday mornings. Temporary tickets that have been issued to early-comers will be exchanged at the booth for regular tickets.

The preliminary events in both the literary and athletic divisions will be run off Friday, and the finals on Saturday. Every auditorium in town, including the school buildings, the city hall and the city hall will be used for the literary contests; and the athletic events will be held at Fair park.

Coach Wilkins expects Hope to make a real bid for district honors in this relay teams are functioning smoothly. It is sized up by "Doc", high school sports writer:

Young Farmer Dies of Rifle Wound Inflicted Sunday

SPRINGDALE.—Mack Neal, 30, tenant on the C. M. Phillips farm near here, died Wednesday from a self-inflicted wound. He shot himself Sunday with a .22 caliber rifle.

Neal had been despondent several days because he sold part of a berry crop at his old home near Wild Cat for less than he had anticipated, his wife said.

Besides his wife, he is survived by his mother, one sister, and two brothers.

Jonesboro Man Sentenced to Pen

Received Two-Year Term in Connection With Preacher's Death

JONESBORO.—(AP)—Don Wilson, convicted of voluntary manslaughter, was sentenced to two years for killing Carter, itinerant preacher and carpenter.

Wilson pleaded self defense after his own daughter, Lono, 16, testified, quoting her father as the night before the slaying saying he intended to kill Carter, whom he blamed for the estrangement from his wife.

The state asked the death penalty.

Pine Bluff Plans To Buy Park Site

Memorial Park Property Soon to Be Available for $18,000

PINE BLUFF, Ark.—(AP)—A movement to purchase Memorial Park property valued at $150,000 by the city has been started by Mayor H. I. Hordness. The property soon will be available for approximately $18,000.

The mayor became interested in the project when he learned suit was being brought against the Memorial Park Association for $16,540 due on notes issued by the association to secure improvement funds.

Memorial Park consists of 53 acres purchased as a memorial to those who served in the World war.

Condition of Crops Improved In Arkansas

Charles S. Bouton, Federal-State Crop Statistician, Reports Average of Crops Better in Arkansas Than in Any Other State

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Sectional reports of rapid agricultural rehabilitation in Arkansas were bolstered Thursday by the report of Charles S. Bouton, federal-state crop statistician, showing the general condition of many crops to be considerably improved over the same period of 1930.

The indicated yield of winter wheat, depended upon by farmers for livestock feed, was shown as 400,000 bushels, or 50,000 more than for 1930.

Mr. Bouton showed the condition of wheat, rye, oats, Irish potatoes and peaches in Arkansas to be considerably better than the average for the United States, and in only one crop was the present condition under 1930 figures. Pastures, he said, will need time to re-establish themselves, the prolonged drought of 1930 and a shorter drought of 1929 having killed part of the stand.

The mild winter and March rains have put fall sown grains in excellent condition, the report said, and in but few sections have frosts and low temperatures injured stock or fruit crops.

Peaches, plums and strawberries were injured, and radishes and spinach crops were retarded in growth by the frosts in the northwestern section, the report said, but in other parts of the state truck and fruit crops were uninjured.

An increased acreage in winter oats was reported, with the condition of 84 per cent of normal.

Acreage of Irish potatoes has been materially increased, the report said, with the condition put at 84 per cent, or six points above the 10 years average for the state.

Low temperatures did some damage to peaches in Polk, Scott and northwestern counties, but in the main producing areas of Howard, Sevier, Pike and Johnson counties, the fruit was harmed very little.

Farm wages are 30 per cent below those of the same period in 1930, the report revealed. The supply of farm labor this spring was 110 per cent of normal, while the demand was put at 55 per cent, or nearly 30 per cent less than during the same period last year.

City Asked To Turn Out For Tournament

Hope has obtained 9 of the 11 literary and athletic tournaments held in District Ten since 1920. On one occasion the meet was held in Texarkana, and another time in Nashville—but Hope has been the only city to give the tournament sufficient financial support.

Last year the gate receipts fell off, and unless the citizens of Hope respond Friday and Saturday this city may be in danger of losing the meeting next year. The Star has been asked by the local school authorities to make a strong appeal for attendance at the events Friday and Saturday. Season tickets are $1; single admission to the track events, 50 cents; and admission to the literary programs, 25 cents.

Squirrel Hunting Law Complicated

Sets Up 15 Different Periods and Divides Counties Into 11 Classes

LITTLE ROCK.—Arkansas squirrel hunters will have to become "learned in the law," or run a big risk of becoming law violators after June 10.

An abstract of Act 207 of 1931, introduced January 19 by Representative McElhaney of Madison county, and known throughout the session in both houses as the "Squirrel Bill," shows that it sets up 15 different squirrel hunting periods, and divides the counties into 11 classes.

The Arkansas Supreme Court and the attorney general have held on many occasions that exemption of a single county from a general law makes the act local or special, and invalidates it. These rulings did not prevent members of the legislature from fixing the squirrel hunting season to suit themselves and their squirrel hunting constituents.

Six counties were given private and special seasons applying to no other counties, and one of these, Montgomery county, selected three different open seasons. Two counties selected the same dates for two different open periods. Six other counties selected two open periods with corresponding dates and 10 counties agreed on the same open season. Eleven counties showed their independence by having the law decree that there shall be no closed season on squirrel hunting within their boundaries.

These classifications account for some 35 counties, leaving all the others under the old law, which originally sought to fix the hunting season in all counties from July 1 to January 1.

Guy Amsler, secretary of the Arkansas Game and Fish Commission, has prepared a summary of changes in the hunting and fishing laws which will become effective after June 10. The bulletin may be obtained upon application to the Game and Fish Commission.

Urge Compliance With Regulations

Dairymen of State Are Warned of Losses to Business

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Arkansas' fast developing dairy interests were warned Thursday that loss of business may result if minimum regulations for milk production similar to that of the federal public health service is not complied with.

State Health officer Garrison issued a warning in connection with the action of the Louisiana State Health Department, prohibiting the shipment of milk into Louisiana from any state where the health regulations are not met.

Comparatively few Arkansas communities have adopted the standard milk ordinances, Mr. Garrison said.

Maybe Driving Judge Ruined His Chances

HAVERHILL, Mass.—(AP)—Fred Parady, taxi-cab driver, was arraigned before Judge John J. Winn, charged with speeding.

"I was traveling no faster than when I took you down here this morning," the defendant told the judge.

"Are you the driver who took me to court?" the judge asked.

"I am," the defendant assured him.

"Guilty. Ten dollars," said the judge.

10 Jurors Chosen For Goynes Trial; 14 True Bills Out

Case Against Goynes For Slaying of Jesse Campbell Gets Under Way

COURT MOVES FAST

Many of Those Indicted Already Disposed of on Pleas

Ten jurors had qualified up to noon Thursday in the trial of Vernie Goynes for murder, which got under way late Wednesday in Hempstead circuit court at Washington.

Goynes is charged with the fatal shooting of Jesse Campbell, local cafe worker, who was wounded on a Sunday night early in December, and died a week later. It was alleged that Goynes and Campbell engaged in a quarrel at the latter's room in a local residence. Goynes was indicted at a special session of the grand jury Christmas week, and is on trial for his life in the April term of circuit court.

The names of 14 out of the 28 indictments brought by Prosecuting Attorney Millard Alford in the grand jury session last week, have been made public. True bills were returned against the following, some of whom have already stood trial:

W. Bailey, involuntary manslaughter; Ed Lewis, murder; Tom Green, burglary and grand larceny; Harrison Curry, assault with intent to kill; Joe Hudson, grand larceny; John Young and Roosevelt Young (an old indictment); Tom Cox, burglary and grand larceny; Alfred Hudson, burglary and grand larceny; Albert Kirk, grand larceny; Richard Lee Walker, assault with intent to kill; William Hart, burglary and grand larceny; George Mayfield, carnal abuse; Nolen Blasingame, burglary and grand larceny; Eliza Lee, arson.

Those already convicted are: Bailey, one year; Green two years; Joe Hudson, two years; Alfred Hudson, one year; Mayfield, two years; Hart, one year in the reform school.

Ollie Greenhaw to Go on Trial Thurs.

Slayer of Negro Farmer Near Charlotte to Face Jury at Batesville

BATESVILLE.—(AP)—Circuit court resumed its sessions Thursday, surrounding the death of O. J. Wright, aged farmer of the Charlotte community Thursday at the trial of Wright's accused slayer, Ollie Greenhaw.

A jury to try the case was empaneled without difficulty.

The prosecution will ask the death penalty, while the defense will plead self defense.

Robbery was said to have been the motive the state charges.

Wright lived in an all white community 8 years and it was not learned until after his death that he was part negro.

DeQueen Robbery Case Goes to Trial

Charles Tobin Is Facing Bar in Sensational $14,500 Holdup

DEQUEEN.—Charged with robbing the First National Bank of DeQueen of $14,500 last December 26, Charles Tobin, 40-year-old cripple, will go on trial in Sevier county circuit court here Thursday.

Tobin, 49-year-old cripple, will go on trial Thursday after the robbery and positively identified as one of the two men who held Terry Hunsucker, cashier, and a customer of the bank at the point of a gun while they rifled the money cages of $14,500.

He was taken to the state penitentiary at Little Rock for safe keeping but later released on bond. Although positively identified by Hunsucker as one of the bandits, Tobin has steadfastly denied any part in the robbery.

In all probability his attorneys will attempt to establish an alibi that he was not in the vicinity of DeQueen when the holdup was perpetrated.

The state will present Hunsucker and the bank customer as its star witnesses, relying upon the former's identification of Tobin for a conviction.

Because of publicity given the robbery and the subsequent arrest of Tobin, considerable difficulty is expected to be encountered in the selection of a jury.

Sam Rickman, who was indicted with Tobin in connection with the bank robbery, is still the object of a search by officers.

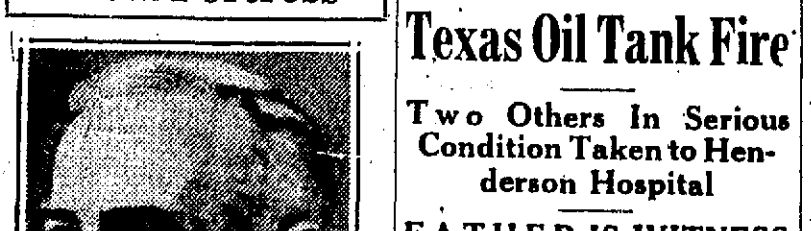

British Parliament Deprived of Matches

LONDON.—(AP)—Smokers among members of the British Parliament will, in future, be forced to buy their own matches.

As part of the great governmental economy wave the Office of Works recently issued an order that when the House of Commons is exhausted no further supplies will be provided.

It would appear at first that this is a paltry saving but records show that 12,000 boxes of "ship matches"—good, stout sticks, two inches long—are used at a single session of Parliament.

Hope Packing Shed Destroyed By Fire

$1,500 Loss Estimated By Owners, McWilliams and Lowthorp

Fire of undetermined origin at 5 o'clock Thursday morning partially destroyed the Hope cantaloupe and vegetable packing shed, belonging to E. M. McWilliams and C. S. Lowthorp, on East Division street at the back of the Hope Retail Lumber Yard.

The top of the building, a two story frame structure was demolished by the blaze, while the lower floor was only slightly damaged.

A quantity of radishes, left in the shed overnight, for parking Thursday morning were salvaged after the fire.

Approximately $500 worth of cantaloupe crates belonging to Mr. Lowthorp individually were destroyed.

The entire loss is estimated at $1,500.

Columbus Pupils To Present Play

"The Alley Daffodil" Will Be Rendered Friday Evening

The pupils of Columbus High School will present a three act play at the school building on Friday night. In addition to the program there will be several special numbers between acts.

A large crowd is expected to attend this play. Pupils of the cast have been working unusually hard on their parts and all are said to know their lines well.

Among those who will appear in the between act performances are Marjorie Byers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Byers of the Providence community and Mary Della White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred White of this city.

Star's Free Cooking School Opens Monday

Daily Attendance Prizes Every Afternoon at the Saenger Theater

Next Monday marks the opening of a week which The Star believes will be one of much enjoyment and profit for its readers. Miss Rada Sue Garrett will begin her free cooking school at the Saenger Theatre, under auspices of The Star to continue throughout the week. The Star invites every woman interested in cooking, home economics and housekeeping to be its guest each afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

The lectures and demonstrations will begin on time, and prompt attendance is a request of both the lecturer and The Star because after the program starts, late comers necessarily interrupt and divert attention. There is no admission charge; the school is a courtesy of the Star to its women readers.

The Star believes that there is something in store for every woman attending the cooking school. The variety of the lecturer's program speaks for this fact. She has not confined her topics to those which would interest only one group of women; she has interesting information for the mother, the young married woman, the interested in balanced meals for her family, and those seeking the "did bits" of cooking.

A marked sequence is noted in the outline of Miss Garrett's program, and while any one day of the school will be profitable, regular attendance is urged for the greatest benefits from the entire series.

The Star is using every effort to make this event one worthwhile for its women readers and believes that it will offer advantages which they will find profitable individually.

Texas Woman on Trial For Robbery

Wife of Texarkana Cafe Proprietor Accused in Atlanta

LINDEN, Texas.—(AP)—Mrs. Elmer Walker, 30-year-old wife of a Texarkana cafe proprietor, went to trial in Cass county District Court Wednesday on a charge of robbery with firearms, a capital offense in Texas.

The prosecuting attorney, indicated the death penalty would not be asked.

The woman was indicted in connection with the holdup of the Richey Motor Company at Atlanta, Texas, last November, a robbery that netted $35. She is the first of five persons, including her husband, who will face trial for the robbery.

The jury was selected and most of the state's testimony completed Wednesday. Willie Kennedy, employee of the motor company, told of the robbery and testified Melvin Morris, 17, one of the accused and a state witness, awoke him and held a gun on him.

Morris then took the stand and testified he and Gilbert Todders, 17, carried out the robbery while Tox Nixon, 17, and Mr. and Mrs. Walker remained on guard.

A rosebush grew by a crumbling wall
At the end of a lonely lane.
Where a solemn silence ruled o'er all
And the tangled grass and the weeds
So tall
Withered for lack of rain.
But the rose bush bloomed all the season through,
With each delicate upfold for the morning dew.
'Twas enough for the rose that the sun shone bright
And the dew fell soft and warm.
Its mission it was to reflect the light.
To gather sweet fragrance out of the light,
And strength from the buffeting storm.
To a higher power 'twas left to decree
What the blossoms should find as their destiny.—Selected.

Mrs. Ess White accompanied Mr. White on a business trip to Menu Wednesday.

Mrs. B. F. Ellington, of Atlanta, Texas, is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arch Moore.

A. L. Burns of Magnolia, president of the Literary Meet for District No. 10 will preside over the meeting to be held, in this city tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Shepard of Little Rock, will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. White, while in the city attending the district meeting of insurance agents.

Dr. and Mrs. John Sykes of Corpus Christi, Tex., arrived Tuesday night for a visit with their daughter, Mrs. D. M. Finley and Mr. Finley.

The Bay View Reading Club held a most interesting meeting on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Arch Moore, West Avenue C. With Dr. Etta Champlin and Mrs. W. O. Shipley presenting a program on Pennsylvania and New Jersey. The Moore home was bright with a profusion of lovely spring flowers. Miss Twichell, the president, conducted a short business period and the roll call responses were interesting items about the lesson subjects. After giving one of the early history of Pennsylvania, Dr. Champlin presented her program as a travelogue of the state, visiting some of the leading cities and telling about many interesting points: Mrs. George Spragins began with Philadelphia, the historical city; Mrs. Fannie Garrett told about Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Steve Carrigan Jr. sketched the lives of Ben West, Maxwell Parish and other distinguished men. Mrs. Haynes followed with an interesting paper on the state of New Jersey. During the social hour, the hostess assisted by her daughter, Mrs. B. F. Ellington, served a delicious salad and ice course.

The Literary and Track meet for district No. 10 will open in this city Thursday night, with registration at the city hall. This year the junior meet will be held in connection with the senior meet, and a crowd of several hundred visitors are expected. 25 schools will be represented. Hope expects to enter representatives in each contest and has a strong track team.

The Wednesday Contract Bridge Club enjoyed a "Spend the Day Party" Wednesday at the home of Mrs. C. S. Lowthorp on South Elm street. For the occasion, the Lowthorp home was beautifully decorated with spring flowers, carrying out a color scheme of pink and white. Bridge was played from two tables, with Mrs. C. Frank Miles and Mrs. R. B. Stanford making big scores. At noon a most tempting luncheon was served.

Mrs. H. H. Stuart will have as guests tonight, Mrs. Eugenia Hineman and Miss Stayton W. C. T. U. field workers.

Old Chicago Tavern Landmark to Be Razed

CHICAGO.—(U.P.)—One of Chicago's oldest landmarks—the Washingtonian home, which was first a tavern and then an asylum for inebriates and drug addicts—is to be razed.

The five-story brick building that houses within its silent walls memories of Civil War days, will be swept aside before the advance of industry.

History of the home began sometime before 1863 when it was opened as the Bull's head tavern and became the hostelry most patronized by cattle and sheep drovers.

Changes following the war sounded the death knell for taverns and the home became a refuge for persons fighting the results of excessive libation.

The home long was regarded as one of the greatest reformatories for inebriates in the country and city courts sent alcoholics there for treatment.

Professor Invents Rubber Preserver

DELAWARE, Ohio.—(U.P.)—To Professor C. R. Yohe, of the Ohio Wesleyan University chemistry department, goes the credit for inventing a non-standing age resister for use in preserving light colored rubber goods without discoloring.

The process has been patented by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, of Akron, Ohio.

The use of Professor Yohe's compounds will make it possible to give longer life to white rubber flooring, water bottles, garden hose and golf balls without discoloring them in any way. These compounds are mixed with the rubber in the liquid state.

Fess Urges Space in Frieze Be Blank

WASHINGTON.—(U.P.)—The historical frieze encircling the rotunda of the capitol will remain shy 26 feet, if Senator Simeon Fess, Republican, Ohio, has anything to say about it.

The frieze depicts the history of the country up to and including 1848, but stops there with 26 feet left. Many discussions have been had in recent years as to what should go in the vacant space, but no action of any kind has been taken.

The space should constantly remain open, says the Ohio senator, who is chairman of the Joint Committee on the Library which has jurisdiction over all art works in the capitol, as a reminder to those who see it that the history of the country is not yet completed.

Cheese Industry Shows 120 Million Production

WASHINGTON.—(U.P.)—A complete review of the American cheese industry for 1929 has been issued by the Census Department of the Department of Interior, showing an annual production valued at almost $120,000,000.

The cheese industry, the report shows, varies but little from year to year, and the figures gathered in the 1929 census can be applied to any other year in the past decade.

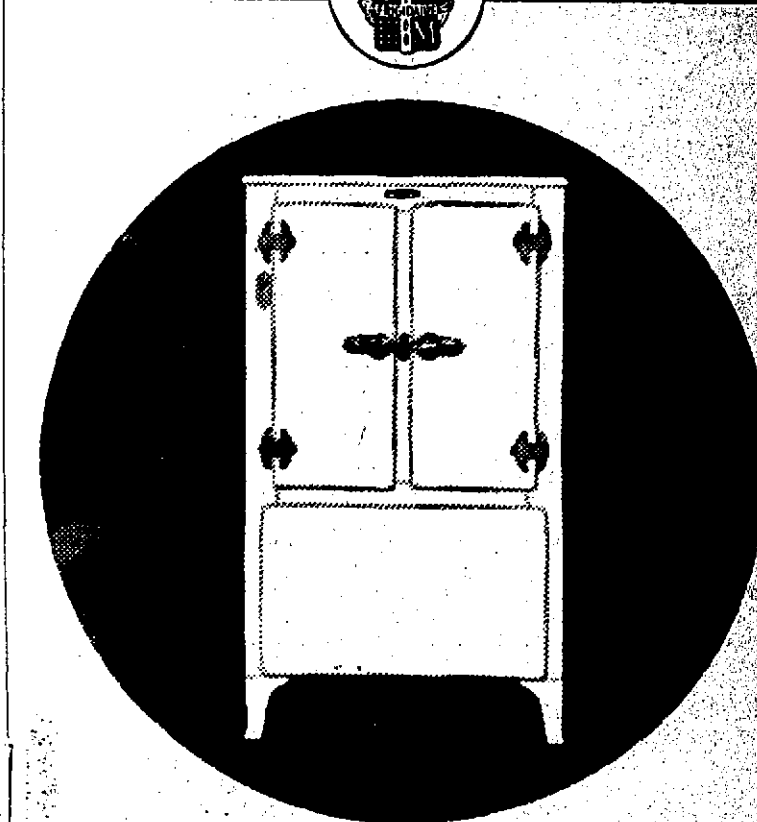

In 1929, the report states, 2,760 establishments produced $118,246,952 worth of cheese of all kinds.

Wisconsin leads in the production of fine cheeses with almost 325,000,000 pounds in 1929 valued at almost $60,000,000, as compared to 47,000,000 pounds in New York and 25,000,000 pounds in Illinois.

Memorabilia of a Baseball Traveler
MR. ROBERT MOSES GROVE is not one to take his own dignity lightly. For that reason Mr. Mack is constantly watching him, guarding him against embarrassment. Of course, you might not think Mr. Mack was watching him, for Mr. Mack can pose for a picture with three members of the Bear Gulch Commercial Club and at the same time make a mental note that a right-field rookie is holding his mouth wrong when going after a fly hit to his left.

One day at Fort Myers Mr. Mack was sitting on the bench holding an animated conversation with three ladies from the Wolf Hollow Library Aid Association and telling them how much he would like to have them call on him if they ever should visit Philadelphia.

Cochrane Smacks One
IT happened that Lefty Grove was pitching to the batters that day. Mr. Mack did not seem to be paying much attention to what his athletes were doing. Mickey Cochrane suddenly lashed out at one of Grove's hard ones and patted it right back at the slender southpaw. Grove had to go into a huddle with himself to save ears, eyes, nose and mouth.

It was most undignified. Red about the ears, Mr. Grove stuffed his glove into his pocket and walked off the field. He was angry, girls, and it was some time before he returned to the slab.

No Foolin' This Time
THE players took their turns and at length Cochrane came up again. Grove unloosed everything he had. High hard ones whizzed close to Cochrane's scound. Sweeping curves dipped plateward as the Mick crouched, red-faced, in the batter's box.

"Plainly they were both angry," about that time Connie Mack was seated with a couple of big shots from Mechanicsburg, Miss., who were arranging a fishing trip for him "next spring sure." He was explaining to them that if they ever came to Philadelphia and didn't visit him, he would resent it keenly. Suddenly he called to Bing Miller, the "dark folks" outfielder of the A's, whose timely blow ended the 1929 world series with a victory for his team. He whispered to Miller.

Carries the Message
AT once Miller went over behind the batting cage, and started up a line of lively chatter. He kidded both Grove and Cochrane unmercifully, in a phoney high-pitched voice, winding up with, "Come now, girls, one of us is going to be injured."

Cochrane turned with a grin. Grove smiled a wide smile. Lefty grooved one and the Mick patted it out of the lot. The funny business was ended.

This is merely one impression of Connie Mack, showing how motherly Mr. Mack can be.

End Piles Quick

No Salves—No Cutting

Your itching, bleeding, protruding piles will go when you actually remove the cause—bad blood circulation in the weak, flabby parts—and not one minute before. Salves or cutting can't do this—an internal remedy must be used. HEM-ROID, prescription of Dr. J. S. Leonard, succeeds because it stimulates the circulation, drives out congested blood, heals and restores the almost dead parts. HEM-ROID has such a wonderful record right in this city, that Ward & Son says one bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets must end your Pile agony or money back. Adv.

Low Asking Prices Reported For Ewe Lambs

OMAHA, Neb.—(UP)—Reports of low asking prices for old ewes and new crop lambs and prospects for free shipment of ewe lambs held over from last fall during the next few months were brought to the Omaha market from Utah sheepmen.

The actual sale of 5,000 head of Utah lambs for delivery at the Missouri river next September and October to five cents a pound was announced recently they said. Oregon growers are said to be offering their lambs as low as four cents with very few takers. Old ewes in both Oregon and Utah have been difficult to move at $4.50 and 2-year olds at $8.50 per head with lamb at side, it is said.

Singing Sheriff Writes Songs For Campaign

JACKSON, Miss.—(UP)—When Gillis Gato, south Mississippi sheriff, started campaigning for railroad commissioner of the state he wrote a number of songs about himself.

At each town where he was scheduled to appear, he would make his "stage speech," strum his guitar and sing his songs. Most of them were about himself and told of his desire that voters work for him and nominate him for the commissionership.

Gato, a veteran peace officer, is known as the "singing sheriff."

MAD MARRIAGE

by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN Author of "HEART HUNGRY" etc.

WEDDING HERE TODAY
Gypsy McPherson, 19-year-old, will marry Phillip, 21-year-old, in the city hall here today. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McPherson, who have been married for 15 years. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McPherson, who have been married for 15 years. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. J. H. McPherson, who has been married for 15 years. The bride and groom will be accompanied by their parents and a few friends. The reception will be held at the home of the bride's parents. The wedding is being celebrated on the anniversary of the bride's birth.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVIII
GYPSEY sat perfectly quiet. She could not raise her eyes; she could not even seem to breathe.

The voice of the unseen speaker continued: "Why, I heard it at the country club. It's all over town now! Jim's leaving this girl he married in New York and is going to divorce her. And here's Marcia Phillips back, a widow, with all that money—! Well, I guess you can see for yourself. Personally I think it's priceless. I never heard anything like it!"

There was a flatter of soprano laughter. A second voice with deeper tones put in something that was an inaudible murmur.

"I suppose you're right," the first speaker agreed, "only honestly everyone knows about it—! Then the conversation in the next booth swung to a coming house party. There was no more mention of Jim Wallace.

The beauty parlor operator was combing out Gypsy's waving hair. "Now if you'll show me how you wear it," she said, "I'll put the pins in."

Gypsy struggled to master her voice. "I—I think I'd rather do it myself, if you don't mind," she said. It seemed to her that someone else had said the words.

"Certainly not. Here—I'll get you a mirror." The other girl disappeared and a moment later was back with a large black mirror. She handed the mirror to Gypsy and was gone. Gypsy confronted her reflection in the mirror. Her cheeks were flushed. She wondered if the hair dresser had noticed the color come into her face. Of course the girl had overheard. Did she know who Gypsy was? She had called her "Mrs. Wallace" but there were a dozen different families of Wallaces. What did all that matter anyhow? What did she care about hair dressers or who the woman on the other side of the curtain might be?

Was it—could it be true? Would Jim do such a thing? Was it because of Marcia?

A tiny, defending voice arose in the girl's consciousness. "I won't believe it," the voice said. "It's only gossip. They're trying to make trouble. I won't believe it's true."

But the tiny voice was not loud enough to be convincing. It was such a very little, pathetic murmur—nothing to cling to in this overwhelming sea of doubt.

GYPSEY realized she still held the comb and that she had not started to arrange her hair. She ought to begin. Someone might come and would think it queer of her to be sitting there, staring at herself in the mirror. She had forgotten about the finger wave, about her eagerness for her hair to be fluffy and soft about her face. She screwed it up into a tight knot at the base of her neck, jammed the hairpins in crosswise. It was only important now to get away from this place before anyone should recognize her.

She was pulling on her hat when the hairdresser reappeared. "Oh!" she said reproachfully, "you're all ready to go! Is the wave the way you wanted it?"

Probably she hoped Gypsy would remove her hat so that she might inspect her work but if so the girl disappointed her.

"The wave is very nice," Gypsy said. She had not even noticed what it looked like. "I pay the girl at the desk, do I?"

"Yes, Mrs. Wallace."

At the name Gypsy colored again. As quickly as possible she left the shop and got out on the street. Then she was undecided what to do next. Her first impulse had been to go to Jim and ask him if what she had heard was true. Now she knew that she could not do that.

This was a private affair to be discussed only between herself and Jim. She could not go to his office where there were clients, other members of the firm, stenographers. She must wait until they were alone at home.

Waiting was very hard. Gypsy turned homeward. She walked past the corner where she should have taken the street car without noticing it. When she realized this she had gone so far that she decided to walk the rest of the distance. At least she was spared the curious glances of other passengers. She had the feeling that faces were peering at her from behind curtained windows of houses she passed and that people were saying, "There she is! That's the girl Jim Wallace is going to divorce. Every one in town knows about it!"

At last she arrived home. She opened the front door and sniffed the faint, delicious odor of Matilda's baking. The kitchen door must have been left open against orders. Even so the smell was delicious.

Everything about the house was orderly, exactly as it should be. Preparations for dinner were at most complete. Sam had departed for the day, leaving word that he would be on hand early next morning to scrub the walks and porches.

"Mr. Wallace came home. I think he's upstairs," Matilda announced. Gypsy looked at the clock on the mantelpiece and saw that it was not yet five. Jim was home early. Wondering what this might mean, she went up the steps to dress.

The first reaction from hearing the shocking news had worn off. The walk had tired her but it also had been soothing. Gypsy slipped out of her street dress and into a thin negligee. She changed her high-heeled slippers for a pair of satin mules and sank to the cushions of the chaise longue. Then she lay back and closed her eyes.

MINUTES passed and Gypsy still lay there. Presently she heard a low knock at the door. "Who is it?" Gypsy called.

It was Jim who answered. "May I come in?" he asked. "Of course."

She started to rise but the door opened before she was on her feet. Jim, immaculate in white flannel trousers and blue coat, appeared. "Don't move!" he protested. "Just thought I'd come in and talk a moment. You look as though you were all in! Have a big day?"

Gypsy sat up. She caught the negligee about her more securely. "I'm not tired," she said. "I went down town this afternoon and decided to walk back instead of taking the car. It was foolish, I guess. It's pretty warm—"

"You should have telephoned the office," he reproved her. "I could have brought you in the car. When you're down town around four o'clock or after you ought to let me know."

"I will next time," she smiled. There was something reassuring about Jim's presence. She seemed so big and strong and sure of herself. Slowly her doubts began to loosen.

Jim inquired about preparations for the dinner next evening. He seemed to be in unusually good spirits, told her that Harrison had been pleased with the invitation and chatted about his day's work.

Presently he asked, "How about driving out to see Abbie and Charles Manley after dinner? Been promising to get out there for a long while."

"I'd love to go," Gypsy said. "Oh, I must start dressing! Matilda will have everything on the table." She went to the dressing table, seated herself.

Jim edged toward the door. "Guess I'll glance through the paper," he said. "Will you be down soon?"

"In 10 minutes!" Gypsy declared. She had her hair down and was combing it out vigorously. There was color in her cheeks now but it was not from humiliation. Gypsy fluffed the soft waves about her face. The beauty parlor operator had done her work splendidly.

There were a half-dozen crystal jars and bottles on the dressing table. Gypsy dabbed in one, then another, rubbing her cheeks, dusting them with powder and touching her ear lobes with fragrant scent. She moved quickly. Soon she was slipping out of the negligee and getting into a pale yellow, ruffled cotton frock. It had a full skirt and sash. The ruffles stood out crisply cool, giving Gypsy the look of a quaint young lady on an old-fashioned valentine.

She turned and ran down stairs, arriving in the living room just as Matilda entered to say that dinner was ready. Twice during the meal Gypsy had the impression that Jim was eyeing her admiringly. She could not be sure.

They drove to the Manleys' home later and remained until nearly 11 o'clock. During the drive home in the cool night Gypsy formed a resolution.

She would think no more of the gossip she had heard in the beauty parlor until Jim himself brought up the subject. She had faith in his honesty. If Jim had decided on some drastic course of action he would tell her about it.

It was comparatively easy to resolve these things; much more difficult to put them into practice.

For one thing, though Jim was gay that evening, Gypsy had the feeling he was too gay. Everything he said and did seemed to be with the conscious purpose of appearing genial and careless. She remembered this and waited.

THE dinner for Mark Harrison was an evening Gypsy liked to think of afterward. The day had been warm but by five o'clock a faint breeze was stirring. Sam put leaves in the table on the porch and Gypsy got out the finest damask in the collection of linen. She put tall white tapers in the silver candlesticks and in the center of the table a low bowl of pink roses. They were from the garden, freshly cut and sweet.

Gypsy wore the chiffon frock with its bright colors against a creamy background. She was a very attractive young hostess as she greeted the gray-haired lawyer. Jim was in his most charming mood.

"Glad to see you, my dear," Harrison said heartily. "Glad to be here. It's thoughtful of you young folks to bother with an old man."

"We've wanted you to come to see us for a long while," Gypsy told him. "Did you? Well, I should have come. Nice place you've got here—yes, a fine old home."

He looked up at the high ceiling and the walls, sighed as though he might be thinking of days when he had sat in that room as the guest of Jim's rather. Instead of being gloomy he smiled and began an amusing anecdote.

They went out to the porch and Matilda began to serve the meal. Harrison enjoyed himself. He seemed delighted with the outdoor dining room, praised the garden and promised to return some day to see it in the sunshine. He told stories that were delightfully humorous and he talked seriously.

They lingered over dessert. At last Gypsy led the way back to the living room and for two more hours Mark Harrison entertained them. When he finally rose to go he took Gypsy's hand in his.

"She's a fine girl, Jim," he said, smiling. "I envy you. Take good care of her!"

After the lawyer was gone Gypsy went to the kitchen to have a last look and see that all was well there. She was feeling almost happy a little later when she climbed the stairs.

The mood continued throughout the morning next day and until early afternoon. Then as Gypsy stepped out to bring in the letters the postman had left she saw Marcia Phillips coming up the walk.

Search Reveals Facts on First Floridan

WASHINGTON.—(U.P.)—Scientific search is underway for the first citizen of Florida.

Representatives of the National Museum believe they are on the ancient fellow's track, but have not encountered him picking through the fossil remains discovered so far. But James W. Gidley, who conducted the 1930 expedition into Florida, has just reported a find of so-called artifacts.

Gidley believes his find constitutes additional evidence of early man in Florida.

"The first of these," he says, "is a crudely formed arrow or spear point. It was lying directly under one of the large bones of a poorly preserved skeleton of a mastodon."

"The other artifact is a small bone awl."

These articles were found beneath stratified swamp deposits.

Court Told Artificial Leg Instruction Worth $15,000

ST. LOUIS.—(U.P.)—Eight months instruction in the art of using an artificial leg was worth $15,000, Meyer E. Frelich, declared in filing a claim for that amount against the estate of his dead pupil.

Frelich is seeking that amount for giving instruction to Benjamin Cohen, whose body was found in the Mississippi river.

Probate Judge Holcomb took the claim under advisement. Frelich said Mrs. Cohen called him and asked him to give lessons to her husband after she learned that he was adept in the use of his own artificial leg. Frelich claims Cohen agreed to bequeath him $15,000. Cohen's total estate amounted to $30,000.

Arizona Apricot Tree Said to Be Record Breaker

WASHINGTON.—(U.P.)—Arizona's entry in the biggest-fruit tree contest is an apricot tree planted by Scotch settlers on top of Natural Bridge near the village of Payson.

The tree was planted 52 years ago. Charles E. Resser, curator of stratigraphic paleontology at the National Museum here, encountered the tree in a search for life forms in Arizona rocks and he says of it:

"Its trunk is now more than three feet in diameter, with a spread of branches exceeding 100 feet and this summer the tree bore approximately 100 bushel of fruit."
